“ The market tended to favour buyers despite the small offering at the National Sale today. Buying was subdued and selective, with demand focused mainly on the more stylish and better-prepared lots. No merino wool was traded today with the view to have a more comprehensive offering for the auction next week. With most of the ewes now been shorn, the bulk of wool coming forward for sale is largely hogget wool types that are showing good production and colour. Dave Burrridge, National Auction Manager
